Dead Languages. Dead languages are ones that one were in common use, but are now no onger spoken unless by scholars who have studied them. The ancient Sanscrit, Greek and Latin have been dead many centuries as common speech, aithough still used to some extent for religious, scientific and literary purposes. Coming down to more recent times, most of the Indian tongues, of which there were many when the white man came, are now dead. All languages have their periods of growth. maturity and decadence, followed by death.—Philadelphia Press.

Blackberries.

According to a recent bulletin of the United States department of agriculture, an average yield of 2,300 quarts of blackberries per acre may be expected under good management. The best land, it is said, is a deep, fine, sandy loam with a large supply of humus and abundant moisture at the ripening season. In growing blackberries one of the most important considerations is to have an easily reached market. Hauling the berries long distances injures them.

For Poultry Raisers.

There is good money in selling egge for hatching. It calls for absolute honesty. Only sell strictly fresh and fertile eggs that can be expected to hatch under favorable conditions.

Mongrel fowls should not be kept for egg production because the eggs will be uniform neither in color nor size. This factor of itself is of enough importance to induce one to select a pure breed, even though the mongrels might possibly lay as well as the pure bred fowls, but this is very Acubtful.

44040444000000000000000 LARGE PROFITS IN NUTS.

Planting of Orchards, Says an Authority, Should Bring Excellent Returns. No land is so poor, stony and hilly; no fence corner so useless; no city front or back yard so valuable but will profitably grow native and some varieties of foreign edible nuts, says Emil Gammeter of Akron, O., an authority on nut culture.

Probably no other field of undeveloped natural resources in all the wide domain of diversified production offers richer and happier results than does nut culture. Ethical and educational institutions are rapidly assuming a share in planting and growing

The advantage of nut raising over other forms of recreation or business at the present time rests in the fact that one can hardly avoid doing new and constructive work in any part of companies for producing just one of the hickories-the pecan-offer at the present time one of the very best of financial investments when such investments are made carefully, and large private capital is being invested in nut orchards. Our imports of nuts rose from $1,700,000 worth in 1806 to $7,300,000 worth in 1907. No one can foretell the magnitude of the new field, but it is pretty safe to say that America could not only have raised most of the $7,-00,000 worth of unts that wer ported in 1907, but could have exported nuts to the tune of the same harp.

The increased demand for nuts is due in the main to two causes-namely, a better appreciation of their appetizing qualities and the numerous ways in which they form a palatable addition to the diet for the average family, and, second, to their use by the vegetarians and persons of similar belief-a group small in proportion to the total population, but still fairly large numerically-who use peanuts, etc., as a substitute for meat and other nitrogenous and fatty foods.

Almost any kind of nut trees will grow in this climate, but not all kinds can be grown profitably, so why not improve and cultivate such of our well known varieties that we are sure will yield abundantly? No nut excels the shellback hickory in flavor and richness, and they will always bring a good market price and a premium for selections.

Black walnuts and butternuts can be easily grown by planting the nuts where trees are wan. I or can be successfully transplanted. They are useful for shade and also ornamental English filberts or hazelnuts succeed well on almost any kind of soil. The larger varieties are sweet and much in demand by candy manufacturers. The purple variety are frequently used as an ornamental shrub and for hedging. The best method of propagating the so called English walnut, which is properly known as the Persian walnut, says a contributor to the Country Gentleman, is either by the cleft graft in sap wood at the time the buds are starting, or by the annular or patch budding process during the growing season in July or August. These methods are also apparently the most successful in propagating the pecan. Details of these processes, except ring budding, are given in bulletin 254 of the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, Washington.

It is probable that certain varieties of Persian walnuts and pecans may be used successfully on black wainuts and hickories, aithough it is not safe to attempt very extensive planting in any district where peaches also are not fairly dependable. In other words, the success of peaches is a better index of the probable success of the Persian walnut than is the success of hickories or black wainuts.

Some planters follow the fractice of setting rows of bardy English walnuts and pecans with the purpose of top grafting them a few years later with better varieties which may then be
